One Surprise Is Negotiator At EEC Talks

By Anthony Lewis LONDON, June 21 (NYT).— Prime Minister Edward Heath named his cabinet last night, em-phasizing continuity rather than

Reginald Maudling, Sir Alec Douglas-Home, Iain Macleod and Quintin Hogg are among the familiar figures who will have key positions. All have served in former Conservative governments. The one surprise is the choice of Anthony Barber, who has been chairman of the Conservative party, to take charge of the negotiations for British entry into the Common Market. The talks are to open formally on June 30 in Luxembourg, Mr. Barber will be Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, a non-departmental title.

Another departure from the lineup in the former Conservative shadow cabinet, although not quite a surprise, is the naming of Lord Carrington as minister of defense. He has been Tory leader in the House of Lords.

Geoffrey Rippon, who was named minister of technology, had been shadow defense minister. But such designations in the opposition party are no guarantee of cabinet office if a party wins.

Lord Carrington, who got the defense job, has been close to Mr. Heath and played a large part in party strategy and fund-raising. As leader in the House of Lords, he has taken a moderate line and resisted temptations to interfere with Labor's programs.

CALL FOR FREE ELECTIONS IN IRAN!

It is the duty of the Committee to Free Iran to inform it world that the present government of Iran has never been it representative government of 30 million Iranian citizens. It wast majority of the Iranian people have nothing but a toke say in selecting their representatives in government. From it highest minister to the lowlest ciert all are selected, put in office, and forced upon the Iranian peoples.

With a background in government of this pattern, it is mockery that Iran, a great and mighty country, should attent to take over the overseeing of Behersin and other protectorat when the British leave the Persian Guif. They must clean the

With this announcement, we demand that every major company doing business with Iran withhold all payments to to present illegal government until such time as free election can be held supervised by a team recommended by the Unit

When a true representative government for the 30 milli-Francan citizens is elected and a constitutional electorats established, oil payments should be resumed. The mon-received from such payments will be spent on programs the benefit every Iranian.

Rilegal confiscation of private property is a continuing pri tice in all branches of the frantan government. Because Iral press is strictly censored, the true picture of government, cornition rarely escapes beyond Tran's borders. So massive is volume of graft, however, that it seeps through various avenued communication to the world.

A recent such incident was brought to the attention the Committee to Free Iran. It involved the forging and fablication of international maritime documents without the Shaknowledge. This was the takeover of the S.S. Firouxy. The act of piracy has amounted to not the but private profit. has made a travesty of international maritime law. to give the Arab client-states enough sheer weight of metal to crush Israel. That is the only possible interpretation. And this in turn explains Gamal Abdel Nasser's declaration of a "war of attrition" last year. By that time, the bulk of the Soviet conclusion. The Soviet arms shipments were obviously planned, from the first, arms had already been delivered. As General Moshe Dayan told this reporter during a recent trip to Israel, "Both Nasser and his Soviet bosses really believed they had enough weight to crush us." But this first stage of the plan went wrong because of the dash and brilliance of the tiny Israeli air force. The Israeli air force checked the war of attrition by proving to President Nasser, and indeed to his Soviet advisers, that no target in Egypt was safe from Israeli bombing attacks. The threat of those attacks was the deterrent that took the pressure off Israel's Suez defences, for many months on

Seen against this background, the recent Soviet takeover of almost the entire air defence of Egypt is even more sinister than it appeared at first. It is, in fact, a way of patching up the long-range plan, to bring the Israelis to their knees, or to crush Israel altogether, that went wrong last year when the war of attrition was checked. The Soviet pilots and SAM-3s have aiready put President Nasser's war of attrition back into high gear. How serious this is may be hard for North Americans to understand. For instance, we read of 30 Israeli soldiers lost, the other day, in a single fight on the Suez front, and no one was concerned. But for little Israel, that loss was exactly what a loss of over 2,800 Americans would be to the U.S.

FREE WORLD WILL ALSO LOSE

In view of all these facts, the present intellectual climate in this country is utterly incomprehensible. The facts show the Soviets have been long maturing and carefully preparing a cold-blooded plan for Israel's destruction. By destroying Israel, the Soviets undoubtedly expect to gain predominance in the entire Middle East. The proofs, by now, are abundant and glaring. Israel has nowhere to turn for help, except the United States.

But on this policy-making flank, President Nixon is uniquely immune from communist and left-wing attack.

NEW YORK, June 21 (NYT).—
Dr. Sydney Chapman, to many the grand old man of geophysics, died Tuesday in Boulder (Colo.) Memorial Hospital after a heart attack and stroke. He was 82.

Although Dr. Chapman constructed a classic theory to explain how eruptions on the sun cause magnetic storms and auroral displays on earth, he was almost as famous for his feats of walking and cycling.

In fact, only a few days before he entered the hospital on June 12 with suspected pneumonia, Dr. Chapman had gone for a two-anda-half-hour walk with a colleague.

A high point in his career was his chairmanship of the committee that ran the International Geophysical Year of 1957-58, known as the LGY. It was the most ambitious scientific undertaking ever carried out and led to the sims which exclude from the free-

Edward Heath, the Conservative party leader and new Prime Minister in Britain, does some neighborhood campaigning prior to his upset election victory last week-announced in a newspaper headline in the background-over Harold Wilson the Labor leader. "The political atmosphere in London this weekend is electric... there is a possibility of real change. Something may happen."

dents in Britain, the experts and the polisters know now how their American equivalents felt on Nov. 3, 1948. Not since Barry Truman's surprise victory over Thomas E. Dewey have so many people been so wrong about an election.
When Prime Minister Wilson went to the Queen a month ago for a dissolution of Parlia-ment, the political climate looked perfect for him and the Labor Government. They basked in the warmin of what seemed to be a mood of public contentment.

Britain had no wars or foreign crises on her hands. The balance of payments deficit, for so long a symbol of national failure, had been turned into a massive surplus. Wages were going up faster than prices,

The public opinion polls indicated that this happy state was reflecting on the Government. years of economic failure and unpopular ity, Lebor was now ahead again and looked a sure winner. Every single commentator thought so: It was all over but the counting.

No Excitement

That mood carried right through the threeweek campaign. The polls, though swinging wildly, held for Labor. The weather was better than in any British June for years. No one seemed very excited, about the election or anything else

The excitement began an hour after the polls closed last Thursday night. For from the first, the results showed a big swing to the Conhere since the Labor landslide in 1946. The Tories were m.

On Friday evening Edward Heath, the Conservative leader who had looked so much like a two-time loser, kissed Queen Elizabeth's hand and became Prime Minister.

there was a shadow on his right: Enoch Powell, who has attracted a large personal following with his emotional speeches on race and order greatly increased his own majority. Among the losers-those swept out of the House of Commons in the Tory swing—were

as big losers, too. Gallup, to take a prominent example, predicted a Labor win by a margin of 7 percent in its final poll-which was wrong by over 10 percent. The pollsters tried, in the wreckage of their figures, to explain it all away: Opinion had been volatile, t unexpectedly stayed away and so on. The truth is that they flopped For those of us who misread the mood of the British electorate there are compensations in the aftermath of the Conservatives' startling upset victory over the ruling Labor Party. It has proved again that voting does matter. Onesided opinion surveys, week after week, need not start an irreversible bandwagon in the real world of politics.

Even more reassuring is the discovery that the advantage of incumbents is not so over-

Rarold Wilson picked his time and got it wrong—that is the other remarkable fact about the British election, 1970. The miracle man, regarded widely as the greatest political operator of modern Britain, made a fatal mistake, or more likely two, which led to his loss to Mr. Heath: the date of the election and the way

In hindsight, at least, fears from Labo skeptics about a June election were right. No one will ever know, but it is hard to argue with the party people who all along thought it better to wait until October. Not all the sun and football won the election.

The more serious Wilson mistake, one almos unarguable by anyone but the former Prime Minister himself, was the non-campaign he put on. He decided that the British people wanted to be reassured against change, and so he chatted up the voters; he appeared on tele-vision looking fatherly and handling hecklers with superb skill; he praised his "team" as a well-tried one that the country would no change.

Mr. Wilson almost never mentioned issues it a serious way, and he certainly did not sugges any sense of the kind of future he had in mine for his party, Parliament or the country. As powerful union leader, Jack Jones of the Transport Workers, put it the morning afte the election: "It is unfortunate that Labor ju-rested on its laurals instead of putting forwar

From the party point of view, that tactic we especially unfortunate because of the effect seems to have had on voter turnout. Historica ly, Labor is always the loser when the vote do not bother to go to the polls. And turno this year was down sharply from 1966.

The Tor. seem to have scored most heavily with the attack on rising prices and their warnings. economic emergencies ahead. What will th do about it all now?

One thing clear is that there will be no tempt at a wage freeze or other legal machine of controls. Mr. Heath genuinely believes free enterprise, competition and productivity the answer to inflation.

But just as clearly it will take time, a lo time, before a new government can do much boost British productivity, reduce strikes a: produce any economic miracles in that wa What happens in the meantime?

The best guess is that Mr. Heath will iss some sort of appeal for restraint on wage ar price increases. In short, there will be anoth round of "voluntary" holdbacks and exhort; The other area of decision that will pre-

The advantage held by the new men at this moment is that they are new. The political atmosphere in London this weekend is electric Many people, even some who wanted Labor to win, have an excited feeling that after years of increasing predictability under Harold Wilson. there is a possibility of real change. political problems ahead.

Specific Mandate for Change

LONDON, June 21 (NYT).— More than most traditional governing parties returning to power after an interlude, the Conservative party takes office in Britain with a specific mandate for change.

On the domestic side, the Tories have spelled out a farreaching program. It would mean quite significant shifts in tax policy. labor law, education, farm prices and government economic intervention generally.

Foreign policy was hardly mentioned in the campaign. But here again a Conservative government could take a very different view on important matters. And Labor could change in notable ways as an opposition

These are some of the main areas of potential policy changes.

TAXATION-The Conservatives have made a firm commitment to cut a variety of taxes. They say they will reduce income tax and eliminate altogether the selective employment tax, a head tax imposed during the Labor years on non-manufacturing industry at varying rates for every man or woman

There is of course no specific time limit on those pledges. But it would be surprising if the Tories did not feel politically obligated to begin cutting taxes by next spring's budget at the

During the campaign, Labor ridiculed the tax-cut promises. It said the Tories could not carry them out without either substituting other taxes or cutting government revenue to a degree that would be highly

Edward Heath and his Conservative colleagues insisted that tax reductions would increase productivity, increase the tax yield at lower rates and thus not be inflationary. But the Ekelihood is that they will also alternatives

The probable choice is the value-added tax used in the Common Market. But the Conservatives are not committed to that, perhaps wanting to await the negotiations for British entry to the market.

PRICES-The Conservatives have ruled out any mandatory wage freeze, backed by legislation, of the kind Labor used in the 1966 economic crisis. But they may well try "jawboning" exhortation through a "voluntary" incomes policy.

In general, the party is committed to competition and laissez-faire economics as a way of keeping prices down. Mr. Heath personally is a passionate believer in free enterprise as the right way to enrich everyone and slow inflation.

SUBSIDIES-Agricultural prices in Britain are now allowed to find their own level in the market, and farmers are then given subsidies to assure them adequate incomes. Conservative policy is to abandon this system and, instead, raise market prices by putting tariffs on food as it enters the country. That is the Common Market system. Its introduction would, however, mean highly unpopular food price increases to the housewife.

Those in Need In addition, the Conservatives say they will confine subsidized rents in public housing to those in real need. They would let better-off people continue to live in council homes but make them pay economic rents. INTERVENTION-Labor has set up the Industrial Reconstruction Corporation to buy snares in private industry, infuse new capital where needed promote mergers. Conservative policy is to drop the

The Conservatives are also ready to cut down the system of grants to encourage investment in less prosperous areas of Britain, notably the north of England, Wales and Scotland.

LABOR BELATIONS - This may be one of the first areas for action in the new Conservative parliament. The Tories made reform of labor law a major plank in the election.

The Conservative idea is to reduce wildcat strikes, the plague of British industry, by allowing injunctions to provide cooling-off periods. They would also encourage unions and managements to sign legally binding contracts, and there would be a whole new legal machinery like America's for managing labor relations.

EDUCATION-Labor, in office, began carrying out one of its long-time programs, the elimination of separate "grammar" schools for brighter children and their merger into comprehensives"—like American high schools-for all children.

The Tories have not opposed the building of new comprehensive schools. But they have said they will preserve many of the traditional grammar schools, which would, in effect, cream off the brighter pupils. Labor legislation to kill the grammar chools altogether will certainly

THE COMMON MARKET-Mr. Heath, like Harold Wilson, is pledged to lead Britain into negotiations to join the Com-mon Market. The talks are scheduled to begin in Luxembourg June 30.

The real significance of the election in this area may lie in what happens to Mr. Wilson and Labor in opposition. For there will be great temptations for Labor to move toward an anti-market line.

Polls show wide public doubt about the European community in this country. And Mr. Wilson could see political hay to be made by attacking the terms of ly opposing entry.

Mr. Heath will, therefore, have a most delicate political prob-lem in handling the negotiations. He will have to meet the requirements of the existing markeet members realistically. but at the same time take care not to open himself to charges at home that he has given too much away.

EAST OF SUEZ-The Labor government decided to phase out all British bases in Southeast Asia and the Persian Gulf by the end of 1971. The Conservatives say they will restore some kind of British presence.

The key Conservative idea is to share a responsibility for the Singapore base with Singapore, Malaysia, Australia and New Zealand. Any British presence would doubtless be welcome to President Nixon, but how many troops would really be involved remains to be seen.

VIETNAM-The Conservative government will probably take about the same view of American involvement in Vietnam as its Labor predecessor: Understanding, no open criticism. but the urgent private hope that the United States gets out.

Here again, however, Labor in opposition could change its line. Mr. Wilson, as leader of the opposition, may very likely pay more heed to the strongly anti-Vietnam war views of many of his backbenchers.

AFRICA-The Conservatives say they will resume shipments of heavy arms to South Africa, stopped by Labor.

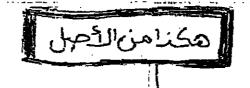

They are also pledged to make one last try at reaching agree-ment with the white minority rebel regime in Rhodesia. Many Tories, in fact, would like to end economic sanctions against Rhodesia, but it may be hard to remove or denounce the United Nations resolutions requiring

Gallup Poll

Agnew? Mostly Yes, But Not as President

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N.J., June 21. -"Agnew says what a lot of people are thinking and are afraid to say," said a 41-yearold Pittsburgh lawyer, interviewed in a nationwide survey, "but I don't think he's got what it takes to be President."

This comment capsulizes the opinions of many persons reached in the survey about a man who is not only the most visible Vice-President in recent decades but undoubtedly the most controversial as well.

The survey, designed to test Mr. Agnew's "public image," found favorable opinions outweighing unfavorable opinions by the ratio of 5-to-3.

But the survey also reveals that only one person in five as of today thinks Mr. Agnew is presidential timber. In criticizing the press, dissident students and "liberals," the Vice-President has struck a responsive chord with broad segments of the population, who, in the words of a midwestern salesman, are tired of being called "racists" and "hard hats."

In backing Mr. Agnew. some persons interviewed reveal a Walter Mitty tendency: "I wish I had the guts to say the things he does," said a 60-year-old Caldwell, Idaho maintenance man. "It's about time some of the punks in this country got told off."

For "speaking his mind" and "calling a spade a spade," Mr. Agnew has won a place in the affections of "middle America." He was number three on the Gallup Poll's 1969 list of "Most Admired Men." behind President Nixon and religious crusader, Billy Graham.

His enthusiasts can most readily be found among persons over 30 years of age, whites, Republicans, and persons living in the South or Far West. His most rociferous critics can be identified as young adults, liberal Democrats, Negroes, Jews and persons living in the East. While Mr. Agnew's appeal with certain groups is perhaps predictable, it is of interest to note that college-educated people are just as likely to respond favorably to him as are the lesseducated, so-called "redneck" elements of the population..

Mr. Agnew has his strong detractors and is disliked primarily for the same reason that he is liked-for being "outspoken." "He speaks his mind," said an elderly New Jersey housewife. "He's tactless and rude." said 2

Kansas City salesman. Admirers say he is "honest" and "sincere," that he has "sound views on the issues of the day." Some say they are pleased by his remarks about the press and college students. But just as many cite these reasons for disliking him.

Criticism of the Vice-President also stems from those who think he "lacks understanding" and is "insensitive to people's problems." Still another group thinks he is stirring up trouble with his remarks: "He should go easy," said a young housewife from Cincinnati. "or he'll have us all at each other's throats." A total of 1,509 adults were interviewed in the survey which was conducted May 22-25. This was the first question: Here are some questions on Vice-President Spiro Agnew. First of all, would you say that you have a favorable or unfavorable impression of him?

Following are the national results and findings by key groups:

Heath's Stunning Victory

From our seat among that large and embarrassed company which had written off Edward Heath with a knowing nod and a flip phrase (we said a month ago that his Conservative party "apparently accepts the common view that it is sure to lose"), we hasten to scrape the egg off our vest and to hail Prime Minister Heath for his impressive victory-given the role of the press, as well as the polls, it is perhaps not for us to call it an upset. Down more than 60 seats in the last Parliament, the Tories are up at least 40 in this one. Mr. Heath had been put down almost everywhere for his supposed flaws in party leadership, in television technique and in rapport with the electorate. Yet for all the objective factors that went into his triumph, the subjective contribution of his personality cannot be denied. Through a hail of miserably adverse polls. party diffidence and a general ennui, he fought dodgedly and he won.

Two features stand out in his campaign. First, he offered the voters bad news on the key issue of the economy, telling them that despite the turnaround in the balance of payments engineered by Harold Wilson, 2 great deal of hard work remained to be done to make Britain competitive in world markets and to raise the quality of life of its citizens. Unemployment and rising prices seem to have validated his message for a great many voters. Free of obligation to Britain's often headstrong trade unions, Mr. Heath must now show what he can do.

Secondly, Mr. Heath managed to keep his skirts clean of any taint of the racism expressed and exploited by his fellow Conservative, Enoch Powell.

In opposition, he had kicked Mr. Powell out of his shadow cabinet and he had pledged that, if elected, he would not take him into his government. The Powell factor, in votes won or lost, will not be sorted out right away. Whatever it is, Mr. Heath is morally free of any political debt to him.

Having in mind the significant departures from its campaign platform which the circumstances of office forced upon Labor, we reserve judgment on what new policy turns Mr. Heath's election may bring, especially in foreign affairs. It is yet to be demonstrated, in our view, that Britain has the resources available to keep up any more than a token commitment to the outposts east of Suez which Labor had decided to leave and which the Conservatives had said they would hold. Though our own credentials for comment may properly be considered suspect, we surmise that the dominant impulse behind Mr. Heath's election was not one of engaging more actively abroad but of making life in a fast-changing technological age more dignified and more secure. This is not said to rule out a large British role in the Persian Gulf, Singapore and elsewhere: once burned, we await events.

It has become one of the more satisfying elements of this country's international life that Americans can receive a change of government in London without wondering whether their interests will be harmed. Such is the level of easy-going trust between the two nations. Harold Wilson had come to appear in Washington as a fixture. But Edward Heath is well known and respected here, and there is no reason to expect that the American government will be able to work smoothly with him. It is somewhat vogue these days to damn all political leaders as being inadequate to the challenges put upon them, and doubtless Mr. Heath will find his share of critics who level that charge. Yet he is his party's choice and now his people's choice and, because it is Britain, that is to say a good deal.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

An Aviation Emergency

Ninety air travelers have been killed and 23 injured in the last 18 months in 114 incldents of hijacking, sabotage and ground attacks on aircraft.

Those grim statistics should be sufficient to provoke some drastic action at last on the part of members of the International Civil Aviation Organization currently meeting in emergency session at Montreal. But not much can be expected of ICAO unless participating nations and other interested parties show a greater sense of urgency and willingness to cooperate for the common good than most have demonstrated so far.

Only 26 of ICAO's 119 members have signed the very limited Tokyo Convention on aerial crimes although that agreement was completed seven years ago and although the United Nations General Assembly urged speedy ratification six months ago.

Efforts to draft a strong amendment to the Tokyo Convention appear to have been frustrated by the refusal of some states to commit themselves to effective measures to punish hijackers. Proposals to impose sancyons on nations that fail to cooperate in controlling hijacking have been impeded by the reluctance of airline officials—who should be in the forefront of any air-safety crusade—to risk losing competitive advantages if such major air terminals as Beirut, for example, were to be boycotted. The air pilots, who have been urging strong measnres on ICAO, have been strangely timid about taking steps on their own to help protect the lives of their passengers and

The leading role of the United States at Montreal is somewhat compromised by the persisting inadequacy of this country's own efforts to control hijacking at the local The hazards of hijacking can be brought under control only through vigorous cooperative action on both the national and international levels. The nations meeting at Montreal must recognize that aircraft and air travelers of every nationality will be endangered as long as any country fails to take the strongest possible measures to detect potential hijackers in advance and to punish those who are guilty of acts of aerial piracy. A strong stand by ICAO is essential in order to stimulate and coordinate local action and to bring recalcitrant nations into line.

-From the Yorkshire Post.

Mr. Heath obviously faces great difficulties and suffers from some inadequacies both of his policies and of Conservative attitudes. Powellism is less of a threat now than it would have been in defeat, but many people will be watching it with fear.

The economic and industrial situation is as difficult as Mr. Heath said it was. Yet his administration comes as a stimulus and a new impetus for the country, and the opportunity for the new prime minister and his cabinet will be a great one.

-From The Times (London).

Mr. Heath undoubtedly has the personal characteristics necessary to be a great reforming prime minister; and he may well acquire in his high office the infectious self-confidence which inspires men to do great things together. He will need it. A lesser man might well blanch at the prospect of, for instance, radically re-casting the taxation structures to encourage enterprise, and introducing all the legislation which will be necessary if, as it is to be hoped, Britain accedes to the Treaty of Rome in the next Parliament. From the Daily Telegraph (London).

It would be expected that Mr. Heath and his foreign secretary. Sir Alec Douglas-Home, will take a firmer stand against the Soviet Union in Europe and in the Middle East, and will be inclined to make less concessions to Moscow. The Conservatives should be able to deal with the Arabs free of what seemed to be guilt feelings displayed by the Labor government for Britain's imperial past. The East-of-Suez policy will also be reviewed and perhaps lead to new ideas on future organization.

-From the Jerusalem Post.

One may not assume that Mr. Heath will give Mrs. Meir the same hearty embrace as did Mr. Wilson before dozens of cameras during a Socialist party gathering. But one may assume that the views of a Conservative government on the necessity of curbing Soviet penetration into the Middle East and the Persian Gulf will be more pronounced than those of the Labor administration, and this would be expressed in the United Nations, in the four-power talks and in conferences between Washington and

Privileged Sanctuary of Conscience

WASHINGTON.—The Congress. the Supreme Court, and the Director of Selective Service have now all spoken on what beliefs or convictions should relieve a man from serving in the armed forces of the United States, but the result is such a tangle of conflicting views that even a draft board of judges. saints and philosophers would scarcely know what to make of it. The three branches of the government all agree, as they have from the beginning of the Republic, that there is, and should be, what one might call a private and privileged sanctuary of conscience. They acknowledge that for some men with certain deep personal convictions about the meaning of life and death there is a "higher which forbids the killing of another human being, and that this "higher law" must be respect-

Basic Question

But which men and which Here the Congress, the Supreme Court and the Director of Selective Service fall apart. Must the test be "religious be-liefs" or may the beliefs be ethical? Are you exempt from the draft if you were a card-carrying Methodat Sunday School, and draftable if your philosophy of nonviolence came from Santayana or Huxley? How do you render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's if you don't honestly believe in either Caesar or God, but still believe with all your soul that killing is wrong and you can't rest in the night if you do it?

These are hard questions to answer in the middle of an undeclared war in Vietnam that has taken over 40,000 American lives and well over a million Vietnamese lives, South and North. But despite the emotion of the war, serious men and women in all branches of the government here are struggling to deal with them objective and they are coming out with dif-

The Congress passed a law exempting from military service any citizen "who by reason of religious training and belief is conscientiously opposed to war in any form." Communist propaganda machine nections are and must remain with should have chosen Prague's ideological monthly to make a sharp attack on the "bridge-building" efforts of U.S. policy.

This monthly, Nova Mysl, says Washington abandoned the concept of "liberating" East Europe in favor of a doctrine of "peaceful engagement" allegedly authored by Zbig-niew Brzezinski and William Griffith and that this, as "bridge building," became the policy of the Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon administrations. Its aim is said to to unleash an "ideological struggle" within the Socialist camp.

The magazine insists that to promote this objective Washington elles upon the corrosive effects of time and upon pressures within the Communist parties" and tries to use other Western capitals, above all Bonn, to divide the "Socialist" bloc. American strategy is "not to make a direct attack on Socialism but to try to assume the posture of a kind of improver, humaniser and democratizer.

Moscow's conviction that this was producing results provoked zechoslovakia's occupation in 1969. Czech trade with the West Lad herum a steady increase and Czech economic reform had departed from Soviet orthodoxy. As one of Prague's leading economists told "The main reason for the Foylet invasion here was that on a you alter an economic system, that cersarily brings will it changes in the political system."

'Brezhnev Doctrine'

What Westerners call the "Brezhney doctrine" according Moscow the right to intervene and keep Soviet-style Socialism going in other states was thus a military theory designed to perpetuate both economic and political systems. But the Czechs contended publicly then -and still contend-that Soviet practice wasn't really Socialist. One prominent professor insisted: "It is a system of war economy and can work where you can intensify production, with predictable results, in a relatively simple society. It can concentrate economic means for special targets, at But this demands a kind of con-

Building Bridges

Attempts to wean Ozechoslovakia. away from its Soviet attachment again or to try and emulate that tactic in a less contiguous land are unlikely to succeed because Russia won't permit it. The Brezhnev doctrine is designed to keep the more westerly Communist states from edging too far into either economic reform or excessive trade with capitalism.

There is sharp opposition to "bridge-building" if by this is meant a loosening of the outer ring of Communist states. Moscow, of course, is prepared to negotiate directly and bilaterally with individual Western capitals. It thus allows itself far more maneuver with Washington, Bonn or Paris than it permits the little lands "protected" by the Brezhnev doc-

But the Congress drew a sharp distinction between religious and ethical beliefs. It said quite clearly that relief from military service did "not include essentially political, sociological, or philosophical views or a merely personal moral done in the last few days is to reject this distinction between religious and ethical objections to serving in war. The majority opinion of the Court was as fol-

"If an individual deeply and sincerely holds beliefs that are purely ethical or moral in source and content, but which nevertheless impose upon him a duty of conscience to refrain from participating in any war at any time, those beliefs certainly occupy in the life of that individual a place parallel to that filled by . . . God in traditionally religious persons. Because his beliefs function as the religion of his life, such an individusl is as much entitled to a religious conscientious objector's exemption . . . as is someone who derives his conscientious opposition to war from traditional religious convictions . . .

The Sharp Differences

This sharp difference between the Congress, which rejected non-religious exemptions, and the Supreme Court majority, which approved them, sent the reporters running to the new head of Selective Service, Curtis W. Tarr, for his answer to the dilemma, and he was just young enough, honest enough, and foolish enough to try to resolve the conflict before he had time to think through all the legalities and moralities, and get his guidelines down on paper. Accordingly, he suggested some rules that must have startled most members of his draft boards in all the communities of this country, who have to pass judgment be limited by its responsibility and on draftees next Monday morn-the type of readership. If the ing. Draftees who claim exemption. Mr. Tarr said, must be "sin-There must be "no question" about it. Draftees must be opposed to all wars and not just the Indochina war. They must have more than a personal moral code, but must prove that they had consulted "wise men" and "system of belief" and gone through "some kind of rigorous training."

On these laws from the Congress, decisions from the Supreme Court and "guidelines" from the Director of Selective Service, young men of draft age in this country are obviously in trouble. don't know where to turn, and the paradox of it is that the confusion favors the rich and hurts the poor.

There is something resssuring philosophically about the Supreme Court's support of ethical as distinguished from religious opposition to the war, something even exciting and ennobling about the American system that still stroggles with life's great imponderables. But the hard fact is that the Surreme Court's decision, obviously designed to be fair and strike a balance between religious and ethical objectors to the war, is unfair to the poor.

The sons of the rich and middle class in America can now appeal to the Supreme Court's decision for relief. As a matter of fact, they can flood the courts with appeals and even threaten the whole Selective Service system, but the sons of the poor are now in even more trouble than they were before. They don't have the money to hire lawyers. They don't have the education to prove that they went through a rigorous system of religious or ethical training, or that they followed the counsel of what the Director of Selective Service calls "wise men."

One has to respect the officials of the Congress, the Executive and the Court for grappling with these fundamental human and philosophic questions, but while the aim all around is fairness and equality, the result is obviously mequal and

No one knows, really; but in such cases it is usually the course of wisdom to embrace the simplest of the several available theories. And the simplest-but not simplistic as it may appear at first giance—is that Labor, the leadership and the party as a whole, contrived its own defeat, and Edward Heath, as a man, engineered his ewn victory. By this I mean that Imbor threw it away, not just by overconfidence but by underestimaking the intelligence of the voters and feeding them pap: Heath won by being his own man, keeping his nerve and his integrity.

Convictions

Even at the lowest point of the Labor party's popularity, a year or so ago, Heath trailed far behind Prime Minister Harold Wilson in personal popularity; as Labor gained and looked like a sure winner, regard for Heath seemed to drop even further. He was derided as an inhuman computer, a stuffy schoolmaster, with all the personal charisms of the bookkeeper in the back room. But he had convic-tions and the courage of them. Wilson had only the courage of complacency. What convictions he had he must have some never appeared. He campaigned not on a policy but on a tranquilizer prescription. The snide observation has been made here, not too wide of the mark, that he believed that you tend to the tactics, the strategy will take care of itself.

It will be a long time, the Economist magazine observed yesterday, before anyone again says that election campaigns do not change people's minds. Labor tried to run this campaign on the issue of no issue: that Britain was prosperous, placid, uninvolved with difficult problems in the world. With some small change in your pocket, why agonize in a struggle for a bid wad?.

Those bland reassurances, said Heath, were the sweet aroma from an opium pipe. Not until the final week of the campaign did he convince the majority of the electorate that Britain-like every other country in this world-faces problems and that the beginning of wisdom was to elect someone who admitted it and was prepared to do something about it.

Powell Theory The supposition that the racist, lationist campaign during the last week by Enoch Powell substantially helped bring about a Tory victory appears, on all the evidence,

If the Powell theory were correct, it should have been effective in the industrial Midlands, Lancashire and London, where non-white

And ther is London and the industrial northwest the changes as counted for only about one-fifth, of the switches to the Tories.

It is hard not to conclude the one week before the vote, Powel decided that the Contervative would lose badly, that therefor and that by breaking ranks and becoming the flery advocate of popular prejudice, he could ad vance himself as the new leader If so, the plan backfired. To Tor-members of Parliament—to anyone decent, for that matter-putting : knife in your leader's back at the moment of his presumed impending defeat is unforgivable. Powellwill not be forgiven.

The results suggest that he is nowhere near the formidable polit. ical figure that George Wallace is in the United States. Britain has not polarized on the race issue and maybe the good sense of its people will prevent it from doing

N.Y. Stock and Bond Markets Register Sharp Gains, Dow Jones Adds 36 Points

By Thomas E. Mullaney NEW YORK, June 21 (NYT). I was encouraged by President Nixon's economic message and feel his three-step plan to deal with inflation was a move in the right direction, but I think he didn't go far enough."

That was one reaction from economic circles following the President's nationwide address Wednesday, and this was an-

"I liked the substance of the President's remarks and am particularly pleased that he reaffirmed his long-standing decision against invoking con-trols or guidelines now that we are beginning to see the abate ment of inflationary pressures."

Still a third reaction was the performance of the financial markets. The securities markets were clearly disappointed and somewhat cynical. Nevertheless, largely because of high expectations, both the stock and bond markets ended the week with particularly buoyant week, with the Dow Jones industrial stock index rising more than 35 points, in only moderately active trading. It rose to the 722 area—about 90 points above the year's low point on May 26. Some of the late-week gains were attributed to the encouraging news on the domestic price front, short covering operations and, to a lesser degree, the victory of the Conservatives in the British election.

Although the President did not abandon his game plan for fighting inflation, he did embel-lish it somewhat and he recognized, publicly, the necessity for some new actions, however mild, to try to obtain wage and price restraint. In doing so, he took the path of compromise and seemed to be counting on imminent improvement in the price area and a cyclical rise in

Despite the growing pressure, both within and outside government circles, for some new initiatives in the inflation battle, such as an incomes policy, a wage-price freeze or guide-lines, the administration adhered basically to its plan of relying on fiscal and monetary measures to bring down the general level of prices.

The President's address was a low-keyed discussion of the inflation problem and how he felt the nation and Congress ought to deal with it. He kept his voice down and his rhetoric soft, but the address itself was a mild display of "jawboning," which the administration publicly and strongly against the threat posed by inflation, citing instances of excessive wage and price actions. With some notable exceptions such as Prof. John Kenneth Galbraith, few advocated much more than that. Some had called for the establishment of wage-price guidelines, and others—not many—had recommended actual curbs on wage and price

The President continued to reject all of those tactics and instead turned to three supplementary proposals that do not bear any great promise of reining the current serious inflation sweeping the country.

The "inflation alert," the Committee on Productivity and the Review Board on Government Rurchasing that the President said he would establish might help somewhat in emphasizing the inflation problem, but they may add up to a toothless program for present situation.

Inflation Alert

The "inflation alert" and this Committee on Productivity could become worthwhile instruments in the battle against ever-rising wages and prices, if the members named to administer the programs were permitted to get involved directly in major wageprice decisions in advance and then were encouraged to lean heavily and publicly against those they considered inflationary.

Next to the President's wellheralded address, the week's highlight in the economic area was the government's report on the rise in May had slowed to an annual rate of 4.8 percent (Continued on Page 10, Col. 5)

Amex and Over-Counter

NEW YORK, June 21 (NYT).—Prices on the American Stock Exchange and the Over-the-Counter market advanced last week in comparatively light trading.

The improved trend was reflected in the performance of the American Stock Exchange's price-change index. The indicator closed Friday at 21.00, up 0.28 from the final figure of the week before. Turnover increased to 12.989,710 shares from 10.270,525 shares the week before.

Most of the Over-the-Counter issues also did better. The National Quotation Bureau's index of 35 industrial issues ended at 316.75, up 8.65 points for the week. Among the stronger issues in the counter market were Fanny May, which climbed 8, and Eli Lilly, which rose 7 points. Texf1 Industries advanced 5; tronic Data Systems soured 8 1/2; Pubst was up 2 1/2 and Alcon Laboratories climbed 2 points. On the downside, Kings Resources fell 2. The company terminated its merger talks with Colorado Corporation and also received some unfavorable comments in an article in Barron's magazine. Other losers included Raychem, which fell 3; Farrington Manufacturing, which was off a point, and Barnes-Hinds, which dipped 1 1/2. Increased institutional and public buying helped buoy most of the insurance issues. The big mover has Hartford Fire, which added 6 points on news that the acquisition of the company by

Cutbacks Take Toll

U.S. Aerospace Industry: A Tale of Poor Health

since mid-1969."

'Greatest Resource'

By Richard Witkin

NEW YORK, June 21 (NYT). -Henry Beers, a 43-year-old Princeton graduate with two degrees in aeronautical engineering, is looking for a job. He was laid off May 15 by the Grumman Corporation, the Long Island company that produced the Apollo moon craft. He has a daughter headed for college in the fall, and two other children, and he is not particular whether his next job is in or out of the gerospace field.

Barry Matin is 40, has a bachelor of science degree from the State University of New York, and until last January was making over $16,000 doing research on quality control for the Boeing Company. He has sent out over 150 letters in a vain search for another job, and he too is quite willing to leave the aerospace field. Meantime, to limit the extent to which he Is eating up his savings, he and his wife have set up a part-time business distributing a line of cleaning products. Layoffs - affecting all categories from scientists and engineers to production workers and junitorial crews—are the story throughout the industry, which provides more employment than any other.

The Figures

The Aerospace Industries Association said last week that total employment was down to 1,194.000 from a high point of 1.418.000 in 1968 and a figure of 1,295,000 last December. And the association predicted the figure would drop to 1,177,000 by September The Labor Department issued an analysis suggesting that "cut-backs in the defense and aero-

Syrian Bank Rate

DAMASCUS, June 21 (Reuters).—Syria yesterday raised its bank rate by at least 0.5 percent in a bid to encourage savings and the return of Syrian capital from abroad. Abdel-Halim Khaddam, min-

"It's what made our country great technologically. Now, all of a sudden, we don't need it." In past business slumps, major aerospace companies could usually cushion the effect on that missile production has flattened out, space spending has dropped sharply following the scientists and engineers by shift-ing them from divisions with diminishing projects to others Apollo build-up and the two rlimactic lunar landings, and airthat were expanding, often into liner sales are in the doldrums fields, like spaceships. (Continued from Page 9) from April's rapid 7.2 percent Last month's increase was the smallest since a similar rise in January—a heartening development to inflationwatchers, even though the seasonally adjusted figure show-ed no change from April.

Economists were encouraged by the performance of the price index in May, but many believe it will be many months yet before the index is brought down to a steady and acceptable level. The upward forces are still strong as a result of the momentum built up in the last half-decade.

Before last week's good news on the consumer price front, there had been even more significant, though hardly noticed, developments in other price areas, especially the slowdown in wholesale prices.

Figured on the basis of a three-month moving average. the Argus Research Corp. points out, the official wholesale price index has declined progressively since the beginning of the year. The annual rate of increase has slowed steadily as follows: 7 percent in January, 5.8 percent February, 5.2 percent in March, 2,1 percent in April and 1.3 percent in May.

"Even more encouraging," according to Argus, "has been the recent behavior of raw materials prices. Since mid-February, the government's index of 13 sensitive industrial materials has fallen by 4 percent. At the same time, prices of nonferrous metals on the London Metal Exchange have been zigzegging downward over the past two months."

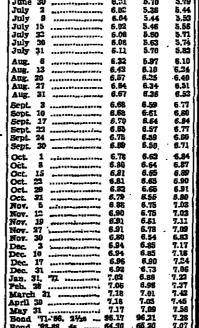

The research agency also said that prices of intermediate materials and finished goods should flatten out as prices of raw materials fall and the excess capacity of industry increased. A little later there should be a seasonal drop in farm prices. But it will be some time before real progress is achieved in the consumer price sector because of continuing rises in telephone and electricity rates, rising state and local taxes and escalating medical

Meanwhile the nation's mild recession continues to roll along, with unemployment at the 5 percent level, industrial production down 3 percent over the last year, corporate profits down sharply and business management trimming costs and spend-

The latest evidence of the economic contraction were the data showing a decline of 1.2 percent in housing starts and the drop of $7.8 billion in personal income during May. But, with auto output rising, an improved outlook for hous-ing and a tax cut coming at midyear, the end of the downturn seems to be in sight

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott.

STOCKHOLM, June 21.-The When the hand was replayed United States team suffered its first defeat in the 1970 world championship here last night, losing to Norway 5-15. However, the Dallas Aces, the world's only professional bridge team, are so far ahead in the standings that they will qualify for the final round, which begins Wednesday. In a key match in the exciting fight for second position, which earns a place in the final, Nationalist China tied with Brazil 10-10. The standings after nine rounds, allowing 10 points for each bye round, were: United States, 128; China, 89; Norway, 85; Brazil, 75; Italy, 67.

In one room Conrad Cheng, for China, opened the South hand with three spades, and his partner, J. Y. Hsiao, raised to four spades. Raising immediately with a void is not an action which would occur to an inexperienced player, but it was certainly right here. South had announced a hand which could play in spades but nothing else, so it would have been pointless for North to bid three no-trump or four diamonds. A diamond bid, indeed, would have prevented North-South from achieving the triumph that actually developed.

Bob Goldman, the American West, took a chance and doubled four spades, reckoning that he could take three tricks and that another was likely to develop somewhere. This calculation was right up to a point, but went sour when he chose to lead the diamond four. South rapidly discarded his heart losers on dummy's diamond winners, entered his hand with heart ruff and played trumps All he lost were three trump tricks for a score of 590 to the same contract was reached. Bob Hamman, for the United States, made the more aggressive opening bid of four spades, influenced by the vulnerability, and West doubled However, M. F. Tai, in the West position for China, decided rightly to take his bird in the hand. Cheerless and relentless, this book by Michael Crichton, "The Andromeda Strain," makes it so you feel the hospital walls closing in on you right from the start. Crichton begins his book with a narrative of what life is like one morning in the emergency ward at the Massachusetts General Hospital

"It's a little like trying to direct trafile," he writes, without ever knowing when rush hour will occur." But Crichton (who interned at Mass General) has not written, "Five Patients" to describe life and death in an emergency ward. The book's title comes from five patients Crichton follows through the hospital to relate the ways in which change has come to medicine. "When I first began to look at the Massachusetts General Hospital in the spring of 1969,"

Crichton says, "I had the uneasy feeling there was too much flux, too much instability in the system. Only later did I realize that change is a constant feature of the hospital environment. The true figurehead of modern medicine is not Rippocrates but Heraclitus."

Crichton's first patient is Ralph Orlando, the fictional name he gives to a 55year-old construction worker badly injured in a scaffold fall at Boston's Logan Airport.

Orlando is wheeled into the emergency ward at a dead run. His heart had stopped on the way over in the ambulance, and he is given a closed cardiac massage, first by a murse and then by a young resident, in a desperate attempt to get his heart beating again.

Orlando dies, but only because whoever rode with him in the ambulance did not attempt closed cardiac massage, a ten-yearold technique. Everything is tried in the hospital-electric shock to the heart, injections of adrenalin and calcium carbonate. directly into the right ventricle. Nothing works.

His second patient is a railroad dispatcher named John O'Connor, a 50-year-old man who never drank or smoked and had never been ill in his life. But on the day he came into Mas-sachusetts General, O'Connor had a temperature of 108 and was so delirious it took ten people to hold him down. O'Connor's symptoms were scarcely helpful: a slightly distended abdomen and a count of 2900 (the highest in hospital history) for an enzyme known as crea-tinine phosphokinase, or CPK. O'Comor survived the first night, though Crichton still wonders how. He spent thirtyone days in the hospital and during that time was felt to we any of a hundred differ including mushroom. poisoning and cholers. He was given the most powerful antibiotics known to man, he was tested countless ways and countless times and he was a prime candidate for exploratory surgery. In the end, he was dis-charged without ever going under the knife.

"Had Mr. O'Connor received no treatment," Crichton concludes, "he would almost cer-tainly have died within 24 hours. His therapy was success-going on in his case." The third patient is Peter Inchesi 22 years old, with a left arm simost severed above the wrist from a factory accident. Two bones in his forearm were crushed. His hand was coinred a deep blue-gray. "Are you going to take it or try to keep it?" one of the admitting doctors asks surgical resident Jean Appel.

"Hell, we're going to keep it," Appel replies. "That's a good hand." In the six-hour operation that follows, Luchesi and his hand get the benefit of thirty years of work in the field of surgery plus the latest techni-

Crichton's fourth patient is a woman named Sylvia Thompson, who has flown to Boston from Los Angeles and who began to feel chest pains before landing. She asks for the airport doctor and is sent to a room with a chair, an examining table, a closed circuit television camera, a computer and a .The nurse takes her blood pressure, pulse and temperature. Then she arranges Mrs. Thompson in a chair and turns on the television camera.

"Dr. Murphy," the nurse calls at a screen where a doctor has suddenly appeared, "this is Mrs. Thompson from Los Angeles. She is a passenger, 56 years old, and she has chest pains. Her blood pressure is 120/80, her pulse is 78 and her tem-perature is 1014."

What follows is an example of one of the nation's first attempts at computerized medicine. Mrs. Thompson never left the airport room while she was being questioned by Dr. Murphy, who was three miles away at Mass General. He never left his chair while he disgnosed her case.

"Mrs. Thompson," he said, "It looks like you have pneumoma. We'd like you to come into the hospital for X-rays and further

The fifth patient is Edith Murphy, a 55-year-old woman whom Crichton uses to explain the way medical education has changed with the times.

Mrs. Murphy has swollen ankles and legs which have so robbed her of her strength that she's forced to quit her job. She comes to Mass General, where she was seen by a succession of doctors and tested for seven straight days. She is I'mally found to have a rare liver disorder, a finding that was reached with the help of three young resident physicians.

Crichton's conclusion: Medicine may be a lot more impersonal these days, but medical education has never been better. Patients" is written book, but it is also a superficial one. Crichton is a young (26), Harvard-educated doctor who has now written, among other books, a com-mendable work of fiction and a believable work of nonfiction, has not plumbed a subject.

anything that should convince liberals that Communism is not joking about taking over the world, it is weeds.

Plant a flower bed and turn your back on it for the shortest little summer night, By morning, there they are dozens, hundreds, thousands of tiny Communist weeds rooting among the day Illies and delphinium, The innocent. the unwary and dupes may leave them alone. "They are such little things," dupes usually say. and besides, if we let them grow, they may turn out to be

This is exactly what the Communists want us to think. That is why, when Lenin invented weeds, he designed them so they would start very small and not begin to look like weeds until their vicious roots have snaked their red tentacles deep into American soil.

Fortunately, by making his weeds' tentacles red, Lenin made it easy for American gardeners to spot them early and turn them over to the FBI. Stalin, after ordering the O.G.P.U. to liquidate Lenin's entire weed apparatus, cautioned all weeds theresiter not to show their true root colors.

Soon afterward, U.S. recognition of the Soviet Union in 1933 fulfilled one of Communism's most ardently pursued goalsthe opportunity to infiltrate skunk cabbage into American gardens under diplomatic immunity.

There is only one way to deal with Communist weeds, Eradication. The most effective method is attack with deadly defoliant chemicals.

Certain persons-we need not examine their real motives here -oppose deadly chemical defoliants on the ground that the deadly chemicals will be taken up by animal life with lethal etfect. Perhaps so, perhaps not. In any case, as Karl Marx wrote in a different context: "You have to poison four and twenty blackbirds to bake a pie." The more satisfying way of fighting Communism in the garden is with bare hands and

By Russell Baker WASHINGTON.—If there is a trowel Dig the trowel deep into the weed's Communistic root until a faint, satisfying snap is heard in the earth; then withdraw the entire weed and call the police. It is advisable, however, to limit such physical attacks to giant Communist weeds whose removal from the American arty floral will make a discouraging impression in Moscow, Peking, Hanoi, Bucharest, Havana, Tirana or whichever other Communist city happens to be controlling the weeds in your particular garden.

The worst possible course is plunging to the knees and going after every single weed in the flower bed. Persons who do this play directly into the hands of Communist strategy which—aside from aiming to strangle the English language in grotesque metaphor—aims to reduce the free American gardener to blithering idiocy.

As was documented by the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee in its 1954 investigation of plantain and dandelion (See Committee Report No. 7307) "Direct Roots to Moscow"), the scheme for inciting, American gardeners to full-scale attacks on weeds, thereby reducing a large part of our population to blithering idiocy, was propounded by N. V. Popraevski at a secret council of the Byelorussia Weed Soviet in 1919.

Popraevski was known in the Kremlin as "the father of goose Given a fulcrum and enough goose grass, he once boasted. "I can strangle America in its own backyard."

One effective way Americans may deal with goose grass is to charge the infiltrated flower bed with a pitchfork and heave huge clumps of dirty Communist goose grass high into the air before it can sense your intentions and go into hiding In this circumstance, it may he wise to glance across your neighbor's fence and see whether he has been encouraging Communist goose grass activity. If so—or even if not—it wouldn't hurt to report his garden to the P.B.I. Oh, incidentally, about milk weed. Be very careful about pulling milkweed out indiscriminately by the roots. Many pieces of milkweed are Communist, of course, but many others are F.B.I. agents who have gone underground.

The U.S. Army's Star Ladies

Washington, NYT).—"If I had ever learned to type." Bizabeth P. Hoisington mused, 'I never would have made brigadier general."

Anna McCabe Hays has no such recollection, but she's a general. too. Between them, they're not only the only women generals in the United States Army today, they're the only women generals the army has ever had in its 196-year history.

Actually, it has been a possibility since Congress passed legislation in November 1967, removing the restrictions on women officers rising above the rank of colonel, but President Nixon was the first to take advantage of it. Last week, the two women had the stars of a general pinned on them.

Getting there has had notbing to do with the women's liberation movement. After all, the Women's Army Corps, which Gen. Hoisington, has headed since August, 1966. isn't competing directly with any males and the Army Nurse Corps, which Gen. Hays has supervised since September, 1967, is essentially a woman's world, too, although the number of male nurses in it is on the rise.

"We've gotten our due from the army," insisted the grayhaired Gen. Hoisington, who looks like she might be a grammar school teacher instead of the soft-spoken boss of 1,000 officers and 12,000 enlisted women.

Gen. Hays, who watches over 7.000 professional nurses, including 2,000 civilians, plus 10,000 para-professionals, also said she considers her promotion as "recognition for service."

As a result of her promotion. the 51-year-old Gen. Hoising-ton has another distinction: she and her brother are the first brother-sister generals in the nation's history. Her brother, Perry M. Hoisington, retired in 1965 as an Air Force major

Sisters Wed Colonels

"And I have two sisters both married to colonels." she continued, "and my parents were introduced by my mother's uncle—a colonel."

With all that, Gen. Holsington remembers, she entered the army through nonmilitary channels. Her grandmother talked her into enlisting back in World War II days.

"I didn't do well enough on my clerical skills test to be sent to typing school," she recalled, but that didn't slow down her progress. She quickly rose from auxiliary to first leader (the equivalent of private and first sergeant) and then went to officer candidate school,

From there she held posts in London, Paris, Frankfurt and Tokyo; as well as in various parts of the United States, including three tours in the Pentagon, before becoming the sev-

The 5-foot 5-inch general, who wears her gray hair closely curled, has kind words for army men. "From the beginning, I've always found them helpful," she said. "WACs came into the service originally to replace men so they could fight. But now we don't work to replace a man, we work to get a job done."

She doesn't foresee a day when women will be drafted ("We can recruit, as many as we need") and she also doesn't believe that American women will ever join in combat as do Israeli women.

"The men of America wouldn't let us." she said. They still want to keep women on a pedestal,"

Gen. Hays, who is 50, went into the army "because my parents, who were Salvation Army majors, had always brought us up to believe we should aim at a life of service."

"In 1942, the patriotic thing to do was to serve in the war," she went on. "After I became a reg stered nurse, I worked as an operating room nurse in Allentown, Pa., until I was old enough to join the nurse corps
